OPEN ACCESS & COPYRIGHT POLICY

Journal of Applied Research & Development (JARDe)

The Journal of Applied Research & Development (JARDe) is committed to the principles of open access, ensuring that all published research is freely and permanently available to the global academic and professional community. All articles published in JARDe can be accessed online without subscription fees or access barriers, allowing readers to read, download, copy, distribute, print, search, or link to the full texts of articles for lawful purposes. This approach promotes the wide dissemination of knowledge and supports evidence-based decision-making, innovation, and scholarly advancement.

JARDe believes that open access enhances the visibility, accessibility, and impact of research outputs, particularly within developing and low-resource contexts. By removing financial and technical restrictions, the journal supports inclusive knowledge sharing and encourages collaboration among researchers, practitioners, policymakers, and institutions worldwide.

Copyright Ownership

Authors who publish with JARDe retain full copyright ownership of their work. By submitting and publishing an article in the journal, authors grant JARDe a non-exclusive license to publish, reproduce, archive, and distribute the article in electronic and other formats. This arrangement ensures that authors maintain control over their intellectual property while enabling JARDe to disseminate the work effectively through its platform and indexing services.

Authors are free to reuse, reproduce, and share their published work in other academic or professional contexts, including institutional repositories, personal websites, teaching materials, and future publications, provided that the original publication in JARD is clearly acknowledged.

Use, Sharing, and Attribution

All articles published in JARD may be shared, distributed, and reused for academic, educational, and non-commercial purposes, provided that proper citation and attribution to the original author(s) and the journal are given. Any reuse of the material must preserve the integrity of the original work and clearly reference JARD as the source of first publication.

Commercial reuse of published content without prior written permission from the author and the journal is not permitted. JARD encourages ethical use of published materials and expects users to comply with applicable copyright and citation standards.

Archiving and Indexing

Published articles may be archived by authors and institutions and are made discoverable through academic search engines and indexing platforms, subject to their respective indexing criteria. This ensures long-term preservation, discoverability, and academic recognition of published research.

Policy Updates

JARD reserves the right to update this Open Access & Copyright Policy to align with evolving best practices in scholarly publishing. Any changes will be clearly communicated on the journal's official website.
